SpringerLink Today, payers face problems with the administrative costs of disbursing payments, as this paper-intensive process contributes to inefficiencies and costs of over $300 billion each year. To reduce administrative costs and meet regulatory mandates, payers are implementing more efficient payment delivery methods. Trends in Healthcare Payments for Providers and Payers Abstract. From the dilemmas arising out of industry's expanded responsibilities as financer and provider of health care, it is a short step to a more active role in efforts at the community level to improve the delivery system and, at the level of individual decision-making, to assist workers in becoming better informed consumers of health care. Industry as Consumer: Health Planning and Consumer Health ... In the federal healthcare industry, a payer can also be a provider at times. This can occur if a patient is referred somewhere else by a government hospital or clinic. One of the biggest examples of this arrangement is Veterans Affairs (VA). Veterans can receive care from VA, but the VA can also refer a patient to an outside specialist for care What Is the Difference Between Payers and Providers
